About the Book

Astounding Stories of Super Science: Volume January 1930 is a captivating collection of classic science fiction tales that showcases the golden age of pulp science fiction. This groundbreaking volume, published by Street & Smith Publications, features an array of visionary writers who shaped the genre and influenced generations of readers.

From the mind of Ray Cummings, the "father of space opera," comes "The Shadow of Nemesis," a thrilling adventure that explores the mysteries of a dying star and its enigmatic inhabitants. E.E. Smith, known for his epic Lensman series, contributes "The Skylark of Space," an interstellar odyssey that introduces the concept of hyperspace travel. Edmond Hamilton, a master of interplanetary adventure, captivates with "The Comet Doom," a gripping tale of a comet's impending collision with Earth.

A. Merritt, renowned for his vivid imagination, transports readers to a lost world in "The Moon Pool," a mesmerizing fantasy that blends ancient civilizations with the wonders of science. These stories, along with other captivating tales, showcase the boundless creativity and imaginative power that defined the early days of science fiction literature.
