Choosing the Right Gear

The first step to surviving off-grid is choosing the right gear. This includes everything from clothing and footwear to tools and weapons. Cobb recommends choosing items that are durable, lightweight, and easy to pack. He also emphasizes the importance of having a good first-aid kit and a reliable source of water.

Building a Shelter

Once you have your gear, you need to find a place to build a shelter. Cobb recommends choosing a location that is protected from the elements and has access to water. He also provides instructions on how to build a variety of shelters, including lean-tos, A-frames, and dugouts.

Finding Food and Water

Finding food and water is essential for survival. Cobb provides tips on how to forage for wild plants and animals, as well as how to purify water from natural sources. He also discusses the importance of having a backup food supply in case of an emergency.

Making Fire

Fire is essential for cooking food, providing warmth, and signaling for help. Cobb provides instructions on how to build a fire using a variety of methods, including friction, flint and steel, and matches. He also discusses the importance of fire safety.

First Aid

Injuries are inevitable when you're living off-grid. Cobb provides a basic first-aid kit and instructions on how to treat common injuries. He also emphasizes the importance of knowing how to prevent injuries in the first place.

Surviving off-grid is a challenge, but it's one that can be overcome with the right knowledge and skills. Survivalist Magazine Issue Jim Cobb provides everything you need to know to stay alive in the wilderness. So whether you're a seasoned survivalist or just starting out, this issue is a must-read.
